ANNOUNCING: VOLUNTEER CONSULTING OPPORTUNITIES

In Sri Lanka, Summer 2011

Improving Competitiveness and Economic Revitalization

The University of Maryland Robert H. Smith School of Business Center for International Business Education and Research (CIBER) and Center for Social Value Creation (CSVC), in collaboration with the Business Growth Initiative (BGI) of the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) are pleased to announce:

Potential Volunteer Consulting Projects in Sri Lanka

for UMD Graduate Students in a variety of fields (including business, public policy, engineering, agriculture, etc.) during the summer of 2011.

Teams of students from among various graduate programs at UMD will be matched to work with local firms in Sri Lanka to apply their technical, business and managerial skills in order to provide actionable recommendations in an exciting and challenging environment.

These volunteer consulting opportunities are likely to include round trip international airfare as well as modest stipends for living expenses for two weeks in-country. It may also be possible for students to earn academic credit for these projects.

Look for more information, including application procedures and deadlines, to be announced in late January via FYI and the Smith School website at: www.rhsmith.umd.edu

USAID seeks to spur economic growth for all Sri Lankans through partnerships with the private sector. Building on a successful track record, USAID programs are developing public-private partnerships, creating sustainable jobs, and jump-starting much needed economic growth to promote stability, particularly in conflict-affected areas.
